Review of the FCPF

- World Bank's Independent Evaluation Group review of FCPF:
 - The FCPF has been an innovative program that has added significant value at the global level in defining the modalities of REDD+ and has produced a roadmap for countries to achieve REDD+ readiness. The FCPF has been willing to take risks and pioneer new ways of doing business.
 - It has created a space for inclusive and transparent debate among donors, forested developing countries, civil society, indigenous peoples' groups and forest-dependent communities around REDD+...Because of the requirements associated with REDD+, the FCPF has facilitated a level of consultation and dialogue at the country level that has not traditionally taken place in sustainable forest management projects.

- World Bank's Independent Evaluation Group review of FCPF:
 - The FCPF needs to update and clarify its mission in relation to changes in the carbon market. Need for greater clarity on how and under what conditions the Facility will support non-market, versus market-based approaches to REDD+. How will countries that are not eligible for the Carbon Fund view their role in the Readiness Fund?
 - FCPF management could enhance its effectiveness by taking advantage of internal World Bank reforms relating to micro and small grants, and by developing a programmatic Results Framework that is more reflective of the technical assistance and financial services that it provides
 - The World Bank needs a strategic discussion on its overall approach to REDD+
 - The World Bank might consider giving priority to (or frontloading) “no regrets” investments and activities such as legal and policy support for land tenure and forest governance reforms that dovetail with the Bank's wider objectives in the forest sector
